

REPORT MAKES PROHIBITION ISSUE

OHIO WETS RESUME BATTLE

DEFEAT TUESDAY ON TWO WET MEASURES NOT TO HALT DRIVE

Oratory And Polite Invective Proves Wet
Ammunition

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 21.—Oratory and polite invective which yesterday could not prevent the defeat of two minor anti-prohibition measures in the state senate today promised to continue almost immediately as a part of the propaganda program of ambitious and determined wets.

Declaring that the two skirmishes which they lost yesterday were not serious enough to bring out the true opinion of the senate, Senators Joseph N. Ackerman (R) of Cleveland and William J. Her-ner (D) of Monroeville prepared to launch into a new attack on prohibition at the first opportunity.

Ackerman will create one opportunity if it does not present itself. He already has invited nationally prominent wets to appear before his senate temperance committee for questioning and is trying to arrange for satisfactory dates for the hearing. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, and Clarence Darrow, Chicago attorney, have agreed to appear.

His bill to force revision of the temperance law having been killed by his own committee yesterday when it revealed an unexpected opposition to his plan, Ackerman was ready to submit for its consideration of one of his other anti-prohibition bills. He has several, assuring no immediate scarcity of problems for study.

True colors of the senate on the wet-and-dry question have not yet

BILL WOULD CURB DIVORCES IN OHIO

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 21.—To prevent his home city from becoming the new Reno, Senator Joseph N. Ackerman (R) of Cleveland today urged the passage of a bill of his own designed to lessen divorce trials.

The bill would require that persons seeking divorce be residents of the state three years and residents of the county one year before filing petitions. State residence of one year and county residence of thirty days are required now.

"Cleveland," Senator Ackerman said today in explaining his measures, "already has divorced half of Syracuse and two-thirds of Rochester. They come over to Ohio for divorces because Cleveland judges aren't so dry as the magistrates are in Rochester and Syracuse."

SEEK MONEY BURIED BY KING BENJAMIN

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., Jan. 21.—Search for the long sought $100,000 cache of cash and jewels hidden away by the late "King" Benjamin Purnell was begun today under the direction of House of David members.

The hiding place of the treasure was described to cult members yesterday by Ada Ross Schneider, auditor of the colony for twenty-five years, after suit was begun by H. D. DeWinst, present leader of the cult.

The searchers sought to locate the secret vault before rival members of the House of Mary, whose territory, reigned over by Mary Purnell, wife of Benjamin, adjoins that of the House of David.

BUILDING RAZED BY FIRE IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, Jan. 21.—Damage resulting from a raging fire which completely destroyed the five-story building housing the Strauss Furniture and Supply Co. here, was estimated at $150,000 today.

Firemen, called on a 5-5 alarm, fought the blaze for nearly three hours before they managed to bring the flames under control. The building was located in the downtown section of the city, four blocks from the public square.

GIFT FOR JIMMIE

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Ralph Sanders, Texas cowboy, was waiting today for Mayor Walker to recover his health and return to city hall so he could present him with a pair of steer's horns, fifty-two inches long. Sanders brought the horns here riding on a bull all the way from Brownsville, Tex. He made the trip of 2,700 miles in 254 days.

RELIEF CABINET IS CONSIDERED TO AID DISTRESS IN STATE

Governor White Hears Recommendations To Help Needy

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 21.—Creation of an emergency cabinet on unemployment and relief to help relieve Ohio distress was being considered today by Governor White.

Selection of such a cabinet, immediate appropriation of funds to allow the state department of education to buy shoes and clothing for children in drought-stricken counties, and emergency steps to help counties unable to pay mothers' pensions, were recommended to Mr. White by a conference of relief workers.

The proposed cabinet, which would remove from the governor's attention most of the details of relief work, would include state directors of welfare, health, agriculture, highways, education and industrial relations, and the state adjutant general.

One department would be designated by the governor as a clearing house for all relief measures and suggestions to eliminate conflicting efforts now being made by several agencies.

No emergency appropriation except that which could be given the department of education to continue purchase of shoes and clothing in southern counties is felt to be immediately necessary.

Red Cross and other agencies are buying food for the hungry, making appropriations for that purpose probably unnecessary now, it was said.

General accord with a bill designed by Senator J. G. Lowry (R) of New Concord, providing $100,000 for relief of children of school age, was expressed at the conference, which was attended by Fred C. Croxton, member of President Hoover's emergency unemployment committee; John McSweeney, Wooster, director of public welfare; I. S. Guthrie, La Rue, director of agriculture; Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson, Columbus; Fred C. Spaulding, state Red Cross head, and state charities division workers.

WEATHER OUTLOOK ALSO DIVIDED

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 21.—Like the Wickersham "dry" report, the weather outlook for the middle west today was divided.

Official forecasters here see continued cold weather for the Dakotas and Minnesota and parts of Wisconsin, but promised a rise in temperature for Illinois and the Ohio Valley.

In the district's first real cold snap in a month, Columbus experienced the coldest weather, the mercury bouncing around the fifteen-degree mark.

Chicago reported temperatures of six above. Temperatures of two below were recorded in parts of Michigan and Wisconsin.

NORTH BEACH AIRPORT, N. Y., Jan. 21.—With Will Rogers as his passenger, Capt. Hawks was to hop off here today for Little Rock, Ark. Rogers and Hawks will tour the southwest making stage appearances for the benefit of drought sufferers.

Movies Attacked At Ohio Meeting Of Church Women

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 21.—"The cesspools of Hollywood are being piped unchecked to the minds of our children everywhere," Dr. Fred Eastman of Chicago, authority on religious drama, charged today in his address here before the fourth annual Ohio conference of church women.

"Their poison consists not in the bathing beauties, who are comparatively harmless, because so dumb, but in their sentimentality, their false views of life, their glorification of the acquisitive instinct," Dr. Eastman declared. "Censorship will never adequately prevent this poison, but the public ought to have some sort of protection from it."

To remedy the situation, Dr. Eastman suggested that the public "cease to trust the movie industry's promise to clean itself from within, and to establish some form of social control over an industry which has such power to undermine our children's characters and to besmirch America's good name abroad."

The Ohio Conference of Church Women, before whom Dr. Eastman delivered his denunciation of the movie industry, is meeting in conjunction with the twelfth annual Ohio Pastor's convention and the Ohio Laymen's convention. More than 1,000 pastors, educators and religious leaders are attending the three meetings. The joint conventions will close Thursday night.

Principal speakers at today's sessions of the pastors' convention were, in addition to Dr. Eastman, Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, of Philadelphia, Episcopal clergyman, author of many books of religious education; Dr. Daniel A. Poling, of New York, editor of the Christian Herald, president of the International Christian Endeavor, lecturer and radio speaker, and Robert Leonard Tucker, Columbus minister.

Judge Florence E. Allen, of the supreme court of Ohio, was the principal speaker on the afternoon program of the Ohio Conference of Church Women. The subject of her address was "Women's Responsibility." Miss Irma E. Voigt, dean of women at Ohio Wesleyan University, was scheduled to address the group at the evening session.

Grove Patterson, editor of the Toledo Blade and nationally-known writer and lecturer, and Dr. Frederick B. Fisher, former Methodist Episcopal bishop in India, now of Ann Arbor, Mich., were scheduled to deliver the principal addresses to the session of the Ohio Laymen's convention.

DELAY IN GOVERNMENT RELIEF PROPOSAL EXPECTED IN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Further delay in enacting the proposed $25,000,000 federal relief fund was foreseen today when administration leaders decided to hold hearings in the house, after it receives the legislation from the senate, to learn whether government aid is necessary to relieve national distress.

The interior department appropriation bill, carrying the relief fund, was tied up temporarily in the senate by a filibuster against an Indian appropriation. Two senators—Thomas (D) of Oklahoma and King (D) of Utah, fought the bill, because it carried an item appropriating $51,000 of the tribal funds of the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache tribes. The senators charged this appropriation would bankrupt the tribal funds.

The President's spokesmen declared they would hold the senate in session continuously today until the bill is passed. They regarded the class over the Indian funds as a part of a general maneuver designed to force a special session of the new congress.

The Red Cross appropriation measure languished because of the Indian row. That particular fact did not annoy administration leaders, as they hope to block congressional action until the middle of February, to give the Red Cross time to complete its drive for $10,000,000.

TWO PRISONERS ARE CAUGHT FOLLOWING ESCAPE FROM JAIL

"Brains" Of Plot And Companion Held In Canton, O.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 21.—Spurred by the capture in Canton, O., of Sam Lovett, alias "Humpy," Ricks, the alleged "brains" of the plot to free himself and four other men from the Hamilton County jail, authorities today pressed their search for three prisoners still at large.

Ricks, a well-known jail-breaker, was seized in Canton along with George Weber, one of his companions in the escape. Their capture, which took place in the attic of a house at Canton, was the result of a police tip.

While authorities throughout the state were warned to be on the lookout for the three men who escaped with Lovett and Weber, officials here took measures to prevent the flight of more prisoners and at the same time pressed a vigorous investigation to learn the details of how Lovett managed to maneuver his break.

Receipts for the purchase of several steel saws were found among the effects of a woman in whose home Lovett and Weber were captured and officials believed she may have smuggled the saws to the plotters in jail.

Reports that three men resembling the trio still at large, held up a man near Georgetown, O., led authorities to concentrate their search for the escaped prisoners in that section of the state today.

POSTPONE TRIAL OF YOUNG SLAYER

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The trial of James M. Maxon, Jr., 21-year-old son of the Rev. Mathew Maxon, Bishop coadjutor of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Tennessee, which was set for today, has again been postponed until Friday. The youth is charged with murder in the second degree for the death of David Paynter, 73.

Paynter was killed in a free-for-all fight in a rooming house where Maxon lived.

The postponement was caused by a delay in the trial of another case in which Assistant District Attorney William B. Moore is engaged.

VAN WERT, O., Jan. 21.—Funeral services for Frank P. Stump, 64, former instructor in the college of agriculture at Ohio State University and founder of the college's official publication, "The Agricultural Student," will be held here Thursday according to arrangements announced today.

Stump, who was a member of the state board of agriculture, was a well-known figure in the state.

SEVERAL INJURED

BUDAPEST, Jan. 21.—Several persons were injured and a score arrested today when 5,000 unemployed marched from the suburbs to the Budapest civic center shouting "Give us jobs! Give us bread!" Police who blocked their path were stoned.

HERE'S THE ANSWER

GLASGOW, Jan. 21.—It has been left to a professor of logic to explain where the college men go when they seek a career.

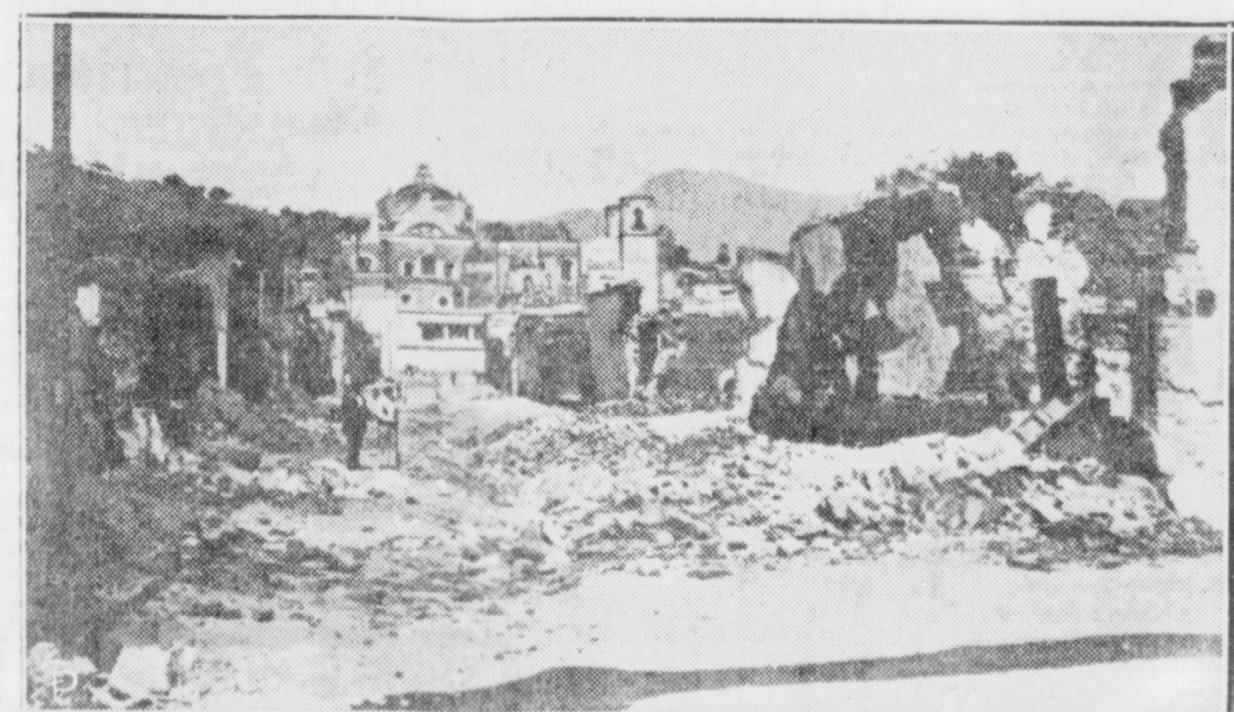

Professor H. J. Paton, professor of logic at Glasgow University told an audience here that: The clever and ambitious ones go to the bar and into politics.

The clever and cautious ones go into the civil service and college teaching.

The clever and queer ones find their way into a museum or write poetry.

And the most stupid (and incidentally, often the most charming) into the army and business.

FIRST PICTURE OF MEXICAN QUAKE DISASTER

BANDITS FORCED TO FLEE WITHOUT CASH BUT TOWN ISOLATED

Villagers Frustrate
Robbery After All
Communication Cut

FINDLAY, O., Jan. 21.—Hancock County authorities were still without clues today in their search for a gang of bandits who blew the safe of the Commercial Bank at Rawson, southwest of here, and left in their wake a village completely cut off from the outside world.

The gunmen escaped from the town in a hall of gunfire after citizens had been awakened by the night telephone operator. They had not had time to loot the bank's vault and left the town empty-handed.

The attempted robbery occurred before daylight Tuesday but it was not until late Tuesday that the news reached Findlay after telephone and telephone wires, which the bandits had severed, were repaired. Traction service to the village had also been suspended by the torn wires.

The entire village was asleep when three automobiles pulled up at the outskirts. One of the cars was abandoned and the other two were driven to the opposite side of the town. The second machine was parked there and the three men then drove to the bank in the third.

The trio overpowered Guy Miller, the night watchman, bound and gagged him and set to work to blow the vault. A charge of nitroglycerine was placed on the lock and a fuse was set. In the meantime, all the telephone and telephone wires into the village had been severed.

Mrs. J. P. Baldwin, the night operator, became alarmed at the wrecked telephone system and aroused her husband. Armed with a revolver, he went to the vicinity of the bank and at the first sight of the robbers he opened fire.

R. R. Wentworth, agent for the Western Ohio Traction Company, appeared on the scene and the two men engaged in a brief gun-battle with the robbers. In a few minutes the town's entire population, numbering 500, was aroused.

The bandits escaped before they could be stopped. It was believed that all of the bullets went wild.

EMERGENCY BILL PASSES SENATE

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 21.—Taking over the Robt. emergency bill from the senate, Ohio's house of representatives today planned to call the measure up for a third reading and final roll-call.

The bill passed the senate by a vote of 27 to 9 late Tuesday. It provides for an appropriation of $24,212,242 from the state treasury to pay salaries and wages of state officials and to defray other state governmental operations during the first half of this year.

Promptly upon its arrival in the house, the Robt. bill was referred to the house finance committee, which met at the close of the house session and unanimously decided to recommend its passage without amendment.

PROBE TRIPLE BOMB BLAST IN BUENOS AIRES

Anarchists Blamed
For Explosions;
Four Killed

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 21.—Triple bomb explosions which occurred almost simultaneously in three railroad terminals here, killing four persons and injuring twelve others, were under investigation by government and railway officials today.

Three of the victims were killed instantly by the blast at the western railroad terminus, and one of the injured succumbed during the night.

Authorities were mystified as to the cause of the bombings, but were inclined to believe they were the work of anarchists. Police rounded up a number of suspects and held them for questioning.

The victims were railway employees killed when a leather handbag brought into the office of the station agent was opened by him with the ensuing explosion. By-standers were injured.

The second blast took place in the coaches of a train of southern railway terminus, resulting in injuries to several persons.

The third bomb was starting out of the central Argentine terminal. The coach was shattered and six persons were hurt.

PROTEST BOXING

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Jan. 21.—Protest against the proposed bill to legalize boxing in West Virginia, which is to be introduced in the state legislature, was made today by the Fairmont Ministerial Association here. The organization has written letters to members of the legislature from this district asking them to oppose the proposed measure.

Here is the first picture of the earthquake disaster in Oaxaca, Mexico, in which more than fifty persons lost their lives, hundreds of others were injured, and the city, capital of the province bearing the same name, nearly demolished. It shows what is left of one of the principal streets of the city, with the Basilica de Nuestra Señora, and ancient place of worship, in the background.

LABOR LEADERS FOR PENSION MEASURE; PONDER INSURANCE

Identical Old-Age Pension Bills Are Introduced

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 21.—Labor leaders today approved a new old-age pension bill now before the legislature and began a study of the first unemployment insurance measure ever proposed in the state.

A determined fight to pass an old-age pension law was apparent after a Republican and a Democrat introduced new pension bills in both the senate and the house of representatives.

Similar bills introduced by Senator David Lorchach (D) of Cincinnati and Representative Martin E. Blum (R) of Cleveland, entitling a dollar-a-day pension to persons 65 years old or over if they do not own property worth more than $3,500, have the approval of both the Ohio State Federation of Labor and the Cleveland Federation of Labor. Two other old-age pension bills already are before the assembly.

The attitude of labor on a bill designed to insure workmen against financial loss during unemployment has not yet been expressed. Employees would contribute 1 1/2 per cent of their wages to the fund and employers would pay two per cent. Payments to unemployed would be about 50 per cent of the ordinary wage, but would not exceed $18.75 a week for more than thirteen weeks a year.

Senator James A. Reynolds (D) of Cleveland, and Representative Horace S. Kiefer (R) of Springfield, introduced similar bills.

Senate bills introduced late yesterday include measures by Paul Yoder (D) of Dayton to compel two-man street cars and to discontinue a pawnbroker's storage charges; by John A. Lloyd (R) of Portsmouth to allow a newspaper to label a candidate's reply to one of its criticisms; by Joseph N. Ackerman (R) of Cleveland to combine the state library with the Ohio State University library.

The wedding took place at 11:00 a. m. in the French Church of Notre Dame, in the heart of the fashionable west end. There were thirty prominent guests, including the French ambassador.

ASSUMES CENTER OF STAGE; PRESIDENT IS DEFINITELY DRY

Expected To Claim Important Part In 1932 Campaign

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Prohibition, attired in the new and confusing patchwork of the Wickersham report, strode to the center of the national stage today with a promise of holding the spotlight for a long time to come.

In the welter of controversy and dispute that has arisen in the wake of the strange report—which presented the curious anomaly of being wet in substance and dry in conclusion—certain developments appeared outstanding and more or less generally admitted. They were:

1. President Hoover has at last taken the plunge and lined up definitely with the dry side of the prohibition controversy, a political development of incalculable importance in relation to 1932.

2. There has now been put forward for the first time in ten years a definite plan for overcoming the eighteenth amendment, around which it will be possible to rally not only the avowed wets but also a great mass of those who, while opposed to outright repeal of the amendment, nevertheless are dissatisfied with existing conditions and ready for a change.

3. The impetus given prohibition discussion and consideration by the Wickersham report insures the

PRESIDENT TO HELP MEMORIAL PROGRAM

MARION, O., Jan. 21.—Expressing considerable satisfaction at President Hoover's announcement that he will participate in the long-deferred dedication of the Harding Memorial here, members of the executive committee of the memorial association today planned to begin arrangements for the ceremony.

In view of Mr. Hoover's wishes, the dedication of the memorial to the late President Harding will be held sometime after June 1st. A definite date for the ceremonies will probably be set at a meeting of the executive committee to be held within the next few weeks.

Hoke Donihoven, secretary of the memorial association, has suggested that the Fourth of July would be an appropriate date. Some members of the association, however, prefer that the ceremonies be held in June.

LEGION CONSIDERS CASH PAYMENT PLAN

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 21.—The eyes of nearly a million ex-service men were hopefully turned to Indianapolis today following the call issued by Ralph T. O'Neal, national commander of the American Legion for a special meeting of the national executive committee of the Legion here next Sunday, January 25, to consider endorsement of the drive for the immediate cash payment of the soldiers' compensation certificates.

Several such bills are now pending in congress. The American Legion had not lent its support to these measures up to now. Should the Legion get behind the move to cash the certificates, a great impetus will be given the movement it was believed here.

DEFEAT TUESDAY ON TWO WET MEASURES NOT TO HALT DRIVE

been revealed, Herner and Ackerman agreed.

After his half-hour attack on the prohibition principle in the senate yesterday, in his attempt to block appropriation of funds for the state prohibition department for the next six months, Herner gave up a chance to embarrass the senators by insisting upon a roll-call vote.

Herner's long address on history of alcohol, in which he traced it from Biblical times to his prediction of election results in 1932, was the first example of oratory in either house this session.

Alcohol, evident in Bible times, has come down to the prohibition era and "it will be with us until the world's end," the senator said.

Debate over its use had started as early as Timothy's time when he wrote "Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake and thine often infirmities," he added.

It was attacked just as it is now, Senator Herner declared, quoting from the Book of Proverbs the advice "wine is a mocker, and strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."

Guiding legislators and a big gallery through the history of fights for liberty, Senator Herner finally arrived at 1930.

Here in Ohio, at midnight on Nov. 4, we heard another voice; it was a most concordant voice re-kindling the lamp of liberty. It was the mighty mingled cheers of a million men and women chanting the prelude of the death knell of prohibition in 1932," he said.

This was a reference to Senator Robert J. Bulkley's victory on a wet platform in November. This election, according to Herner, shows that twenty-one of the thirty-two members of the state senate ought to vote wet on every wet or dry bill.

Senator Ackerman followed Herner's speech with a vicious attack on the state prohibition department.

Both speakers hoped to prevent state expenditure of $63,350 which they described "a senseless and useless effort on the part of our prohibition enforcement department to enforce what has proved by experience to be an unenforceable law."

"The partial appropriation bill which provided for the expenditure of $27,000, however, was passed by a 27-0 vote, however."

One senator revealed himself an active dry in yesterday's prohibition activities.

C. J. Anderson (R) of Shelby doggedly insisted upon indefinite postponement of Ackerman's plan to revise the temperance day bill.

He also scolded Herner and Ackerman for taking up the senate's time with speech-making against a routine bill upon which the pay envelopes of hundreds of state employees depended.

Referring to Herner, who read his speech from a 12-page manuscript, he said, "If I had a cause like this to plead for, I wouldn't have to bring notes in here to help me."

Issue being carried into the 1932 campaign, probably as the dominant political issue, and if not settled then it will be carried forward into 1933.

4. A final and supreme effort is to be made to enforce prohibition in the next two years, in order to make a showing that will convince the doubters that it is possible to obtain some degree of adequate enforcement despite the majority opinion of the Wickersham committee that there is no adequate enforcement now, that there never has been, and that probably there never will be. Into this effort, the Hoover administration will throw all its resources, and all the money that congress will provide.

The present congress, of course, will do nothing with the Wickersham report. It is overwhelmingly dry, and besides it has only some thirty-odd days of legislation left before it expires by constitutional limitation on March 4.

It is even doubtful if the new seventy-second congress will be able to do much. Unless there is a special session, it will not assemble until next December, which will be on the eve of the 1932 campaign, and congress rarely plunges into a controversy of such far-reaching proportions at such a time.

As was expected, the report of the commission pleased neither the wets nor the dries, although the latter, after reading the anomalous conclusions, rushed into print with high praise for the findings.

The wets are furious because the commission rendered a set of dry conclusions, based upon a mass of extremely wet evidence. They charged today that the commission, after adducing an array of facts and figures that constitute a damning indictment of prohibition, yielded at last to execute pressure and upon the indictment returned a verdict not in accord with the evidence.

The dries are rendering lip service to the report, wholly upon the conclusions with which the commission wound up its report—opposition to repeal of the amendment, opposition to modification of the Volstead act, and opposition to either national or state governments engaging in any plan of manufacture or sale.

But the dries privately are horror-stricken at some of the evidence brought out in the report, and particularly are they apprehensive and uneasy over the significant fact that seven out of the eleven members of the commission put themselves on record as favoring immediate revision of the 18th amendment, and the remaining four indicated they favored such action should enforcement not show decided improvement in the next few years.

CHARGES FILED IN CONNECTION WITH DEATH OF HORACE ANKENEY

Affidavits charging Carroll St. John, Cass St., Dayton, with reckless driving, and J. C. Wells, Columbus, with operating a truck not properly equipped with a tail light, were filed in Probate Court Tuesday as an outgrowth of the accidental death of Horace Ankeney, 80, prominent Beaver Creek Twp. farmer and former legislator, on the Dayton-Xenia Pike New Year's eve.

The affidavits were signed by L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, but the two men are not expected to be arraigned for several days as Probate Judge S. C. Wright is out of the city, attending the annual convention of the Ohio Association of Probate Judges.

St. John was the driver of an automobile which crashed into the unlighted rear of a truck operated by Wells, and parked along the highway, almost instantly killing Mr. Ankeney, who was standing behind the vehicle assisting the stranded driver. St. John was held mainly responsible for the accident by Coroner R. L. Haines, the

No. 5

The Answer

Economic Gain not Economic Waste

- N. 1—We believe we can easily point out the economic gain to the citizens of Xenia by the proposed power and light plant.
- N. 2—We have made contracts with the Fairbanks-Morse Company whereby the Fairbanks-Morse Company will build and operate the local power and light plant.
- No. 3—It is well known that the Fairbanks-Morse Company, now in its one hundred and first year of existence, is the world's largest manufacturer of Diesel Engines and is well able financially to fulfill any contracts entered into.
- No. 4—The Fairbanks-Morse Company has, through its subsidiaries, successfully operated electric power and light plants in more than ten states.
- No. 5—Our contract with Fairbanks-Morse Company calls for a Diesel Engine generating plant of the most modern and efficient type, complete in every respect and with a safety factor of fifty per cent. This means that at all times there will be available fifty per cent more power than the normal requirements of this city. Our contract positively guarantees inducements to new industries.
- No. 6—We maintain that to replace the old equipment now in existence with new and modern and up-to-date equipment is not an economic waste but would be a very decided economic gain for the city of Xenia.
- No. 7—We maintain that the erection of a new, modern power and light plant and distribution system at a huge expenditure on which the city of Xenia will enjoy the taxation and which would give several months of employment to a great many of Xenia's unemployed men in the present time of need, is not an economic waste but an economic gain well worth considering.
- No. 8—We are firmly convinced that the best interests of the citizens of Xenia do not rest in the continued patronage of the Dayton Power & Light Co., which we claim has charged exorbitant rates for the many years last past, and is now offering reduced rates only, we think, for the reason that it is faced with our competition.

It is a fascinating sport to merely watch his hands in their firm, confident touch, accomplished with a certain freedom and ease few pianists possess. It might be noted, also, that Mr. Siefert played eighty-one pages of music without a note before him."

SENATOR FESS PRAISES HOOVER MESSAGE ON DRY LAW REPORT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—President Hoover was congratulated today on the stand he took in his message to congress, transmitting the Wickersham report, by Senator Fess of Ohio, chairman of the Republican national committee.

The national chairman called at the White House and personally conveyed his approval in person, although asserting he did so as a senator rather than as the party chairman.

Senator Fess subscribed to the generally accepted theory that Mr. Hoover by his message has forecast the party course with regard to prohibition in 1932.

Using the White House steps as his rostrum, Fess had to say concerning the Wickersham report: "The report in the main is encouraging to the dry cause."

"The only thing I am disturbed about is that the people are not satisfied with enforcement. It is a difficult problem, enforcement is not entirely efficient. But conditions are so much better than under the old system that until a better plan is devised there is nothing to do about it. But there should be better enforcement if the people are to be satisfied."

"I am opposed to revision, especially along the lines recommended by the Wickersham commission. I am particularly opposed to that part of their proposal which would make the prohibition question a purely political one in the future instead of an economic one by placing in the hands of congress."

"This would mean a prohibition fight every two years."

Bryson, Clifton Road, re-elected president, has served in this capacity for a number of years. J. B. Rife was re-elected vice-president and H. C. Aultman was again selected clerk of the board and superintendent of county schools. H. E. Bales and J. E. Hastings are the other board members.

Mr. Shawhan, the newly-elected member, is head of the Grange organization in Greene County and has been active in Grange work for a number of years. He formerly served as a member of the county school board and has also been a member of the Beaver Creek Twp. school board.

At the board's organization meeting the members also adopted the

SENATE HOLDS UP ACTION ON HOME NURSERY

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 21.—Declaring that an extraordinarily careful investigation must be made of all expenditures this year, the senate finance committee today delayed action on an appeal of $100,000 for a nursery at the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home, Xenia.

Officials of the Home had hoped that the amount might be included in an emergency appropriations bill which was expected to be passed in the senate this afternoon.

Capt. H. L. Hays, superintendent of the Home, Col. H. M. Edwards and Col. D. H. Pond, members of the board of trustees, appeared before the finance committee in behalf of the request for the appropriation.

Although members of the finance committee appeared to regard the proposal for the appropriation with approval it was declared that the committee wished to visit the Home and personally investigate the needs. Officials complain that the Home "is seriously overcrowded."

FRALEY MAY STILL FACE CHARGE HERE IN SHOOTING CASE

Charles Fraley, Grape Grove, under indictment here since last October on a charge of shooting with intent to kill, who is held in Washington C. H. on robbery charges, may be returned to Greene County after all for prosecution, Sheriff John Baughn disclosed.

Fraley was apprehended at Mt. Sterling. He and a man named Rapole, arrested at Washington C. H., are alleged to have jointly staged a number of robberies in Madison, Fayette and Pickaway Counties.

Fraley, who has been a fugitive from justice since August 24 when he is alleged to have shot John Corrigan, 46, of Grape Grove, following the latter's refusal to give him a drink of whiskey, was captured by Night Officer Harry Dixon, of Mt. Sterling, when engaged in stealing a tire from an auto, Dixon said.

Under questioning, Fraley is said to have confessed hauling live hogs in his auto, but was unable to give a satisfactory explanation as to how he had come into possession of the hogs. Mrs. Fraley told authorities her husband had frequently brought home butchered hogs and that he had shot a man near Jamestown some time ago, but escaped arrest at the time.

The woman also told the officers Fraley and Rapole left early one evening about last December 7, returning at midnight with a quantity of household goods. Rapole's arrest followed and a search of their respective homes disclosed household goods identified as stolen in Washington C. H. it is claimed.

Both suspects have been turned over to the Fayette County sheriff, who believes their arrest has cleared up a number of hog thefts and other robberies in that vicinity.

Indictments will be sought in Fayette County against both men, after which Fraley may be surrendered to Greene County authorities for prosecution on the more serious charges which is pending here against him.

Mr. Haley had resided in Greene County his entire life and spent most of the time near Cedarville. He was the son of the late Daniel and Elizabeth Welch Haley, natives of Ireland. He was a member of St. Brigid Church, Xenia and of the Holy Name Society of that church.

Mr. Haley never married. He is survived by the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. Elizabeth Butt and John Haley, Dayton; Timothy Haley, Springfield; William N. Haley, New Orleans, La.; and Mrs. Kate Setz and Miss Mary Haley, at home. Funeral services will be held Friday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Brigid Church with burial in St. Brigid Cemetery.

APPEAL IS DENIED BY SUPREME COURT

The appeal of Charles Weddle from the judgment of the Greene County appellate court favoring Stanley J. Nicley was rejected Wednesday by the Ohio Supreme Court.

The suit related to a $200 note alleged due Nicley from Weddle who claimed he had no personal interest in it but had signed it for another person.

The case was tried three times in Common Pleas Court here. Weddle won twice, but each time the Court of Appeals reversed the lower court and sent the action back for re-trial. At the third trial a judgment was awarded Nicley, this decree being affirmed by the appeals court.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

How shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory.—II Corinthians, III:8, 9.

FAMILY DESERTERS

Social workers report more cases than usual of men who desert their families. "Non-supporters" are disappearing into the unknown distance. It must always be so following periods of business depression. Supporting a family calls for real work. Man of an indolent disposition should not attempt it. They would do better to avoid beguiling some good woman by their wheedling ways, to join their doubtful fates. They are not fitted to assume the cares of family life, and have neither earned its joys, nor have they prepared themselves to carry its loads.

After a man of that type has worried along for some years with bills for food and clothing and rent, life looks dark to him. Some women aggravate the situation by constant nagging and failure to do their share toward a happy home. But whether or not the wife is partly to blame, the man begins to regret the freedom of his single life.

Then if hard luck comes, unemployment, illness, etc., the joys of family life have turned to dust and ashes, and he dreams of making a new start free of all encumbrances. Some fine day, his place is vacant, and the pathetic and shabby wife is left helpless with hungry children clinging to her frail skirts.

Marrying a woman and having children and then not standing by these dependent ones is about the limit of meanness. If a man has had hard luck, any good woman will make allowances, and either help earn money or at least refrain from reproaching her husband for things he can't help. The man who drops out of sight and leaves a woman to fight her battles alone, should be pursued and led back by the ear, and made to work if work can be had, or else he would better go to jail.

THE NATION AND WEALTH

Many people will never feel that it is right, while many millions of worthy folks suffer from poverty and can barely subsist, that there are many who have far more money than they know what to do with.

Many of these people say that the government should curb wealth by heavier taxation, or by laws that would make it difficult to acquire great fortunes.

Such laws, unfortunately, could easily have a tendency to restrict the development of industry. If a wealthy person is taxed too heavily, or if the laws bear down too drastically on him, he is apt to restrict his enterprises. He fears the future and feels he has nothing to gain by expanding his business, employing more labor, improving his product, and serving the people better. The dollars gained by taxing him too heavily might be far more than offset by the unfortunate results of discouraging him from business enterprise.

Another theory is to look to the generous sentiments of wealthy people to use their money in ways that will benefit the public the most. When a person who previously had been ungenerous, is induced to use money in ways the most helpful to the community, either by employing more labor, or by giving it to philanthropies which enable the people to rise above their difficulties, more is gained than if a greater share of his money had been seized in taxation.

A great many wealthy people are already showing a very fine spirit of generosity. They pay high taxes cheerfully, and might be glad to pay still more, and their money is liberally offered to good causes. They thereby gain a greater happiness than is ever won by those who merely spend money on personal enjoyment without thought of those less fortunate than they are.

Although some of the members of the body seem to think so, congress is not an institution supported by the nation so that politicians will have an arena in which they can carry on perpetual political campaigns at public expense.

Now if Mr. Norris, instead of Mr. Raskob, had said that he never has been a Republican, a whole lot of people would have believed him.

Maybe some of the boys want a special session because they don't care to go home and meet their friends and neighbors.

The more the country discusses morals the fewer of them it seems to have.

THE OLD FOLK FOOL US

I've seen it happen dozens of times. Something saddening is happening in a family—and half the energy in the home is spent in keeping the news from some old man or old woman. Somebody has lost all his money. Somebody has been arrested and may be sent to prison. Somebody is terribly ill and close to the door of death. Or somebody is dead and they don't want Grandmother or Grandfather to know just yet.

"It would be too great a shock," people whisper, "and you know Mother has a weak heart." Or they say, "He was Father's favorite grandson, Father couldn't stand it. He's had so much trouble in his life that this would be the last straw."

Well, the young folk don't know as much as they think they know. They are young, so they think they are strong. They live with the old folk, but they don't know them very well. They think the old men and women are "just hanging on by a thread," just barely clinging to life. And they DON'T know the iron resolution that is in many an old heart, the philosophy, the understanding of the materials of living. The Old Folk fool them.

I've seen old men and women take blows that knock over the proud young men and women and reduce them to helpless weakness. I've seen an old woman hear of the death of a beloved child with only a faint quiver of her mouth—and then I've seen her set her chin and go to work. I've seen an old man take a bitter pill from life with just a sad shake of his head.

They've lived long enough to know that tears do not help, that grief must be accepted, that men and women must go on their ways without cringing and whimpering; they have learned to be strong and they don't want protection from the young folk.

They fool you with their wisdom and their strength, and they make you feel like a fearful child who has lost his way and needs the guidance of those Old Folk who know the path through life.

The Old Folk fool us and I'm glad that they do. They've learned how to Suck It Out—and they could give the rest of us lessons in living.

FOLLOWING THE LEADERS

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Having read a number of forecasts by eminent statisticians, business economists and industrial leaders The Pastor is prompted to don the Star Spangled Pajamas of the seer, and hurl at The Congress a little fine and fancy forecast of his own:

I confidently predict that the year 1931 may, of may not, be a period of quick recovery—depending altogether on whether it is, or isn't.

CANINE HOSTELS
Dogs, whose owners reside in the swank caravansaries of Tommany Town, lead a drab existence—drab from the Bone Polishers' viewpoint. Their mode of existence is luxurious enough; but it is luxury according to the human estimate, and that makes all the difference in the world.

Forty dollars a week is an average hotel-fee for housing a dog. Transients with canines pay two dollars a day for quarters, a dollar and a half a day for meals and a dollar extra for having the dog taken for a daily stroll around the block in the company of a bell-hop. Grooming the hound is five dollars additional, and for toys and accessories, another five bucks.

In one very swanky inn, runways are provided on the roof and sleeping arrangements outfitted with insect-proof cushions.

There's no limit to this sort of tomfoolery. A hostelry on the fringe of Park Avenue where the Mutts of the Mighty are catered to, canine patrons are provided biscuits, with their pictures on the sides of the biscuit tins.

SENATE CONSIDERATION OF POWER BOARD NAMES DESCRIBED AS SLIPSHOD

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

WASHINGTON—Nothing is easier to understand than the reasoning of the senators who express alarm at the initial official act of Dr. George O. Smith, Col. Marcel Garsaud, and Claude L. Draper, in their capacity as a quorum of the commission recently appointed by President Hoover to protect the public interest in the development of the power industry. And nothing is much harder to understand than these senators' meek acquiescence in President Hoover's appointment of Dr. Smith, Colonel Garsaud and Mr. Draper, at the time the senate considered their names, just before the holidays.

Most of the senators were not satisfied with President Hoover's selection of members of the new power commission when the list was first announced; they cannot plead that they did not realize until later that anything was the matter with the commission.

All the senators who are howling now, were dissatisfied from the outset. From the standpoint of senators who regard the "power interests" with suspicion, there is ample ground for complaint concerning the start in office made by Dr. Smith, the new commission's chairman, and his associates, Colonel Garsaud and Mr. Draper, but it strains the imagination to find a good excuse for any such senators who originally voted to confirm the trio.

There may or may not be such a thing as a "power trust," but quite a few senators unmistakably believe that there is, and they never have been backward in saying that they consider President Hoover friendly to it.

Accordingly, when he appointed Dr. George O. Smith, Colonel Marcel Garsaud, Claude L. Draper, Ralph B. Williamson and Frank R. McNinch to the new power commission, it was natural to expect that these senators would investigate the entire five with a fine-tooth comb for any indications, on the part of any of them, of power trust sympathies. Instead, their investigation was a mighty perfunctory. The nub of the inquirers' report was that they could discover nothing in particular concerning any one of the quintet except Dr. Smith, who is a well known scientist, but with no power record, "pro" or "anti."

The report of course was "blatant" since any man has a past sufficient to furnish a tolerably convincing line on him if thoroughly scrutinized.

The obvious truth is that the senators were lazy, and, to some extent, did not want to discover anything which might tie up congressional business.

Christmas was just ahead. The solons wanted a vacation.

Further, many senators were afraid of being accused of playing for delay, as a means of forcing an extra session.

The net result was that the senate's action was careless. It was almost unpardonable carelessness, considering power's enormous increasing importance in the national economy and the extent to which the public's rights are being committed to the new commission's care.

Confirmed, Mr. Williamson and Mr. McNinch also were in a hurry to get away for the holidays, and away they went, the former to his home on the Pacific coast, the latter to his, in North Carolina.

But Dr. Smith, Colonel Garsaud and Mr. Draper tarried in the capital and were sworn in, and the first thing they did was to sweep out of office, among others who had served under the old commission (consisting of Secretaries of War, the Interior and Agriculture, Hurley, Wilbur and Hyde, ex-officio), now supplanted by the new body of five, Chief Accountant William V. King and the power board's man of law, Solicitor Charles A. Russell.

Thus started the present row.

According to the anti-power trust senators, the one thing of all others desired by the trust (if any) is to get its investment figures recognized with a liberal amount of padding, as a preliminary to charging high rates, and to make the government pay fancy prices for any privately-owned plants it may ever acquire.

Solicitor Russell and Accountant King, however, have fought padding; they are credited with having kept at least half a billion in watered valuations out of power commission bookkeeping.

If there is a trust it certainly must have disliked Russell and King for this interference with its plans, and the anti-trust senators instantly jumped to the conclusion: not only that that was why they were fired, but also that Dr. Smith, Colonel Garsaud and Mr. Draper had proved themselves pro-trust commissioners by firing them.

Consequently, as soon as congress re-convened the anti-trust senators undertook to rescind the Smith, Garsaud and Draper confirmations.

Now, under the rules, the senate can do this if the reconsideration move is launched within two sessions after a confirmation has been voted, but it never actually has been done, and the senate's secretary, Colonel Edwin P. Thayer, assuming that it would not be done in this instance, already had notified the president of the action taken; whereupon the president had issued his appointees' commissions to them.

There was a mean complication; with the officials literally on the job, it was rather late to nullify confirmation of their appointments.

The senate's simplest way out of it appeared to be to pass the buck to the White House, which it did by asking the president to return the three appointments for further senatorial discussion. The president refused.

And the senate has been debating since its next move.

Meat Loaf—Baked Potatoes
Vegetable Salad
Scalloped Onions or Cabbage
Carrot Pudding
Tea or Coffee

This is another economical menu. All of these foodstuffs are reasonable in price and obtainable in all parts of the country. The meat loaf may be sliced and served cold the second day with warm-up potatoes, and the pudding may be re-steamed, thus saving time and work as well as money. The vegetable salad may include celery, lettuce or cabbage, bits of raw carrot, and a sprinkling of onion, according to what vegetables you have in the house.

Today's Recipes

Meat Loaf.—Two hard cooked eggs, one teaspoon lemon juice, one tablespoon grated onion, one tablespoon chopped parsley, one and one-half pounds ground beef, one-half pound ground pork, three-fourths cup cracker or bread crumbs, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, three-fourths cup milk, one egg, bacon strips. Lay two bacon strips in the bottom of the pan to season the meat and prevent it sticking. Mix all seasoning with meat and stir all together with a fork, then add crumbs, then the egg well beaten. Place half the mixture on the bottom of the pan, on the bacon strips, place two hard boiled eggs, end to end, on this. Cover with the rest of the mixture, shape into loaf, cover with two more strips of bacon. Bake in oven 475 degrees for 15 minutes, then reduce to 375 and bake until done, about 40 minutes more. Baste frequently with juice in pan.

Carrot Pudding.—One cup raw potatoes, two carrots, ground; one cup suet, chopped fine; one cup raisins, one cup currants, one cup brown sugar, one-half cup flour, one teaspoon each soda, salt, Steam two or two and a half hours and serve with a sauce. A good substitute for English plum pudding.

Don't Blow Your Nose, Expert Says

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Among the frequent admonitions addressed to the young, none is considered more hygienic than: "Child, blow your nose."

The wisdom of this is, however, sometimes called in doubt, as indicated by the following excerpt from a book called, "Your Nose, Throat and Ears," by Drs. L. S. Oaks and H. G. Merrill (published by Appleton).

"When any material slides down over the inferior turbinate to land upon the floor of the nose, it causes a tickling sensation, or the nose seems filled up; and immediately there arises an almost irresistible impulse to blow it vigorously. Not thinking of anything but the momentary relief afforded, we apply some pressure to partially close both nostrils, or completely shut off one, and send a blast of air through from the throat. Results a satisfying noise, with expulsion of more or less 'corruption' and the feeling of a job well done. However, in the words of a much respected instructor, whose of English had not yet reached its acme: 'That are not all, gentlemen! The end results of that blast may be more far reaching than we at the time realize. Bacteria-loaded mucus, lying under the middle turbinate, is in close relationship with openings of the sinuses; and whenever we create a sudden pressure within the nasal chambers, we are almost certain to force some of it through into the cavities, which means actively extending the infection to them. This is exactly what ordinary blowing of the nose does for us.'

"If one simply must perform this savage rite, it should be done with both nostrils freely open and holding the handkerchief over the nose. Leaving one nostril open and closing the other will not do, because it is not possible to close the posterior opening of that nasal chamber, and harmful pressure is bound to be created within it. Neither is partial closure of both, or of one any more safe or acceptable.

"Patients frequently, when this is explained to them, irritably remark: 'Well, I simply have to blow my nose. How else can I get this stuff out?' Nature's way is to move the secretions backward into the throat from where they may be expectorated, and we should do well to follow her suggestion. The process is unpleasant to listen to; but it is to be hoped the time will come when our bugling-the-nose ceremony will be considered even less aesthetic. Until we do learn to avoid this procedure in the nose, we are going to keep right on having annual crops of sinus disease, with their accompanying economic losses and human suffering."

Virginia Advises Girl To Re-marry

—By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE—

We have all had the experience of watching a young couple in the first few months or years of their marriage. To older people who have been married for years and years, seeing such young people adjusting themselves and discovering all sorts of unexpected and delightful things about one another is a sweet, solemn experience which tinges their thoughts sometimes with wistful recollections of the early days of their own marriage.

The girl is so sweet and coquettish, so bent on being such a good housewife, and so anxious to please the loved young husband. And the young husband is so attentive, so protective.

But after awhile the two grow used to one another. They are no longer surprised and charmed with unexpected traits and dear little unaccustomed ways. The mate is an old story—a twice-told tale—and nagging and fault finding take the place of love and admiration.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I have broken my own heart and now I'm so unhappy."

"To begin with, I went with a boy for four months, and we loved each other dearly. Just two years ago we were married, and we are just 23 now. I had the most wonderful husband, who was perfect in every respect, only when he became mad he was extremely unkind to me and would strike me. This was his only fault, so naturally I overlooked it, because I really loved him."

"Then I went to the hospital for an operation, and after that I grew rather indifferent toward him because he began drinking occasionally. We began fighting over finances. Both were making good salaries, we had a beautiful home, nice car and pretty clothes, only fussing about whose money we were spending. It went from bad to worse."

"One evening we went dancing and my husband passed out he became so intoxicated, and I started a little flirtation with a young man at the dance. He told me how pretty I was and how a sweet little wife was abused, etc. I fell for this flattery, as most girls do, and I became so indifferent toward my husband I finally saw this young man after my husband had ordered me out of the house for no reason whatsoever. I was gone three weeks when he sued me for divorce. I sued also, and won the trial, so we were divorced."

"He has been drinking constantly and going with so many girls, and I know he's trying to forget. But when two people love as he and I you can't forget. I have work with this same party a few times, but he means absolutely nothing to me, and over my foolishness I've lost the dearest boy in the world. I feel I can't go on without him. Life seems so empty, and yet I've been so good since I left home. I can't find interest in anyone else."

"I become so discouraged I feel like giving up and just running wild, just to forget him. Maybe if I'd drink, smoke and chase around, some day I could forget, even though I would have ruined my own life over it. I wish I could advise every young couple, for I've wrecked my own sweet home, and the only happiness I'll ever know, Virginia Lee. Please publish your advice."

MRS. K. B. A.

I cannot see that the fault of the failure of your married life should be laid entirely at your door, my dear. You were both somewhat to blame. He struck you when you nagged, he drank, which certainly doesn't make for marital happiness, and you both quarreled over finances, then he drank more and you flirted; hence the climax. Don't take all the blame.

If you and your husband can't get together and try marriage over again, interest yourself in your work and in some hobby that will bring you in contact with pleasure and interesting people, and let time heal your loneliness and longing. Write again and let me know how you are getting on.

BROKEN HEARTED: If you are convinced that the boy friend wants to come back, write and ask him. No reason why you should not become someone when you might be together.

Extra Care Of Eyebrows Essential

—By GLADYS GLAD—

Eyebrows can do so much to enhance the charm and expression of a face, that they are deserving of more care than the average woman gives them. And in this season of off-the-face hats, well-groomed eyebrows are absolutely necessary for smartness. You can't keep the grateful shade of a hat brim any longer, in order to conceal your poorly-groomed brows.

The day of the eyebrow that was only a tiny, fine line is now past—praise Heaven! You may allow your eyebrows to really be eyebrows again. But you must take care that they are not scraggly, and that you allow them to form as long a line as possible.

Careful plucking with tweezers will eliminate any scraggly appearance, and will keep the brows looking clean and neat. And the skillful use of an eyebrow pencil can make the eyebrows appear longer. Eyebrow pencil should be applied carefully and lightly. If it is applied too heavily, it may give the face an expression of hardness. Eyebrows that turn sharply downward at the outer ends need special care in the elongation process. If you make these sagging lines too long, you may give an appearance of age to your face.

The eyebrows respond beautifully to care, but disastrously to neglect. They may retain their luster for years, but eventually, if you neglect them, they will become thin, dull, dry and almost colorless. Of course, in such a case, the eyebrows may be dyed to give them color, and plain vaseline or castor oil applied to promote their growth. But why allow the eyebrows to get into such a state when, with a little care, they can be kept in good condition?

It is most important that the eyebrows be brushed with a small, stiff brush each time that the toilet is made. The first strokes should be towards the nose, to remove all powder thoroughly. If the tiny particles are permitted to adhere to the roots of the hairs, they will cause the brows to become dry. The second brushing should be towards the temples, to lay the hairs smoothly and evenly in place. In this final brushing, first use an upward and outward stroke, to emphasize the arch. Then brush the tips of the hair lightly downward until they lie in an even line.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Fat Thighs
Artist: Lie on your left side, on the floor. Swing your right leg forward, and your left leg backward and then bring them together again. Do this for ten counts, and then repeat, lying on the right side. Deep knee bending is also an excellent exercise for the thighs.

Fingernails
Worried: Massage a bit of warmed olive oil into the base of your nails nightly before retiring. This will remedy the brittle condition of your nails, and will keep the cuticle soft.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents in coin, for each, to cover cost of printing and handling. FRAMED by Phil

Contrary to the opinion of Leany Sachs, coach of the Loyola University basketball team of Chicago, which won thirty-four consecutive collegiate games before losing to Purdue in an extra period contest last season, Coach Walter "Pinky" Wilson, Xenia Central High mentor, does not believe there is anything in particular wrong with the way high school basketball is conducted.

One of the shrewdest basketball coaches in the country, Sachs recently related an experience to explain what he means by "something wrong" relative to scholastic basketball.

Sachs makes his practice to visit strange playing floors to inspect them in advance before his Loyola basketball players play a scheduled game away from home, and it was on one of his customary pre-game visits that he arrived at a particular court in time to watch one of the city's best high school teams engaged in practice.

This particular high school coach, he said, sent his team through a much longer practice session and a more severe one than he would think of prescribing for a squad of more mature college players. "This same coach is allowed to book only twelve games a season for his team to prevent him from overworking the boys, yet he taxes their physical strength more in one practice I saw than he would in any three games," Sachs said.

"Pinky" Wilson does not entirely agree with Sachs' point of view, although he also condemns the idea of unusually long and strenuous workouts.

"Pinky" points out that longer practice sessions are needed to develop a team from a bunch of rookies, a majority of whom know little or nothing about the fine points of the game, whereas on a college squad all of the basketball candidates usually are already well grounded in fundamentals because of prior experience in their high school days, and they develop with twice the rapidity of normal candidates for high school teams.

Daily practice sessions of Xenia Central High basketball squads prior to the opening of the season average not more than two hours in length, "Pinky" declares. After the season begins the length of the workouts are cut to an hour or an hour and a half with the regulars not required to indulge in even that much practice.

A sports writer reports that a Northern Ohio school, which is shopping around for a football coach, recently made overtures to Frank Lane, well-known official.

Lane has given so much general satisfaction as a sports official that the school seeking to obtain the services of a live wire as its coach, concluded Frank was very desirable for the job.

But Frank, it seems, is well satisfied to stick to the officiating phase of both sports, declaring "I make more money officiating football and basketball and have far less grief than any coach in Ohio, so I'll stick to officiating."

Our afternoon mail—such as it was—brought the following letter: "I would like to correct one or two statements made in Monday's paper concerning the Spring Valley-Jamestown basketball game last Friday evening. In the first place, Spring Valley's margin of victory was only one point instead of two, the final score being 22 to 21.

The account also stated Spring Valley's first team did not enter the game until late in the first half. As a matter of fact, the first team was inserted in the lineup just before the close of the first quarter with the score 8 to 3 against them. Jamestown then proceeded to outscore them 8 to 5 during the second quarter.

"I would also like to point out that Jamestown maintained the lead until late in the final period after Harris and Staley had been removed from the game on personal fouls. Then and only then, was the Valley team able to pull up on even terms and finally score the winning basket in the last minute of play.

"I am sure, however, these misstatements were not intentional. Also let me state that the purpose of this letter is not to alibi Jamestown's defeat, but rather to correct the tendency of someone to alibi Spring Valley's rather poor showing against a supposedly weaker team."

Very sincerely yours,
Kenneth Shane,
Jamestown, O.

LATE RALLY PROVES MARGIN OF VICTORY OVER POWELL TEAM

Weatherstrippers Are Tight With Points;
Famous Five Wins

By PHIL FRAME

THE Lang Chevrolet Falcons snapped out of it in the fourth quarter of the game with Kirk's Weatherstrippers at Central High gymnasium Tuesday night and closed with a rush to register their seventh victory of the season by a margin of 49 to 35 over the sturdy little band of Powell, O., basketballers.

Minus the services of Bill LeSourd, high-scoring forward, the Falcons gave a listless exhibition during the first half, particularly in the second period. Leading by one point, 12 to 11, when the first quarter closed, the Xenia quintet presented a disorganized defense and offense in the next period and the Weatherstrippers obtained a lead of 24 to 18 at the half-way point.

Shortly after the second half got under way the visitors boosted their margin to eight points. Then the Falcons suddenly hit their stride and scored ten straight points. Ahead by one point, 32 to 31 at the close of the third quarter, the local basketballers proceeded to display their true form and turned the contest into a rout in the last quarter, outscoring the Powell quintet, seventeen to four in the last final ten minutes of play.

The Putnam brothers, Nolen and Marvin, were the twin sparkplugs in the Falcon offense. Nolen, particularly, was the star of the game scoring nine baskets and adding a free throw to register nineteen points. Brother Marvin tallied ten, while Wilson, Smittle and Smith contributed six apiece.

Baader and Tone, visiting forwards, between them accounted for twenty-nine of their team's points. Baader scoring fifteen and Tone, fourteen. They were held to one basket apiece, however, in the last half. Baader, who was a member of the Delaware High School quintet which won the state Class B championship about three years ago, gave a dazzling exhibition. He had dribbling down to a fine point and played a great floor game. Most of the points scored by Tone, his partner in crime, were from long range, and he was unusually proficient from mid-floor in the first half.

Although trailing, 12 to 9 at the half, the undefeated Famous Five, another Xenia independent quintet, kept its record spotless by scoring a 33 to 25 victory over the Engineering Records team, holder of first place in the Wright Field League standing, in the preliminary. Joe Smittle, who later in the evening saw action with the Falcons, topped the point-making of the winners with four baskets, while Rowlands, a clever forward, tallied twelve points for the faltered five. CEDARVILLE COLLEGE DEFEATS DAYTON FLYERS 21-15 TUESDAY

AKING an early lead and maintaining it throughout the game, Cedarville College's basketball quintet squared matters with the University of Dayton court team and averaged an early season one-point defeat, by vanquishing the Flyers, 21 to 15, in a return tilt at Alford gymnasium Tuesday night.

The Flyers invaded Cedarville favored to win by a comfortable margin, but the Yellow-Jackets, having tasted victory for the first time this season last week after losing five games in a row, gave another improved exhibition and registered their second successive triumph rather easily.

Forty seconds after the opening tip-off, Turner, star Cedarville forward, put the Borstmen out in front by making a short shot. Rife followed with another basket a moment later and the Yellow-Jackets were off to a lead which they never surrendered, leading at the half, 10 to 5.

KEEPING It Hot

Stove League Gossip

A lot of the boys this stove league season are chewing the fat about this earned run business. The earned run system of ranking pitchers, you know, was introduced as a cure-all for troubles in selecting the best hurlers. It was supposed to be well high perfect. Now some of the boys have their doubts.

Pennants are won on victories, they point out, and a good number of pitchers near the top of the earned run list last season were not so high in the games won standing, and vice versa.

In the American League the winner of the most games had also the best earned run record—Lefty Grove of the A's. However, Ad Liska of Washington, ranking second to Grove in the earned run column was tied for nineteenth place in percentages of games won and lost.

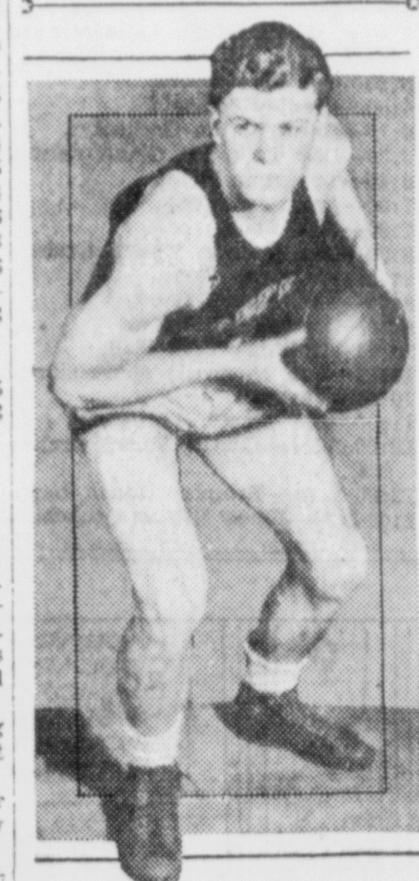

The difference is more startling in the National League. Dazzy Vance of Brooklyn led all big league pitchers in effectiveness, allowing only 2.61 earned runs per game, but the Dazzler, just a little better than breaking even, ranked fourteenth in the victory list.

And then there is Remy Kremer, of Pittsburgh, ranking twentieth in the earned run column, but tied with Pat Malone of the Cubs in most games won, 26.

Among those who believe the won and lost, earned run or any other method of determining pitching effectiveness are the bunk is Owner Bob Quinn of the Boston Red Sox.

"The way I judge pitchers," says Quinn (and kindly bend an ear because he knows plenty baseball), "is how they pitch in the pinches, how their courage stacks up in face of bad support, how well they pitch with weak clubs behind them and what judgment they use while on the job. This record stuff is hokey."

As a guard at Ohio State, his play is one of the features of the splendid work Ohio State is doing on the hardwood floor this winter.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—A flood of profit taking and professional selling in the second hour of a dull session today blocked the progress of a rally in the active industrial and utility stocks. Prices spurted at the start, under the stimulus of a further two per cent gain in steel output, bringing current production to 46 per cent of mill capacity. United States Steel pushed ahead to 141½ and Auburn Auto in which the shorts are believed to be "locked up," advanced four points to 114.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

CARL T. POMEROY, C. P. H.
HEALTH OFFICER

June 10th, 1930

American Cigar Company,
111 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

Dear Sirs:

As a public health officer, I cannot help but recognize the fact that your campaign to eliminate the evils resulting from promiscuous spitting and the spit-tipping method of cigar making is commendable and in line with the health work done by my own department.

I see that you call it a "Crusade of Decency". Certainly insanitary methods in cigar making are indecent. An advertising campaign like yours, which exposes such indecency and points the way to the cleansing of your industry, deserves the support of my department.

While I express no preference for your cigar over any other, I am pleased to inform you that I do endorse your campaign to show the public the advantages of avoiding insanitary practices. You are free to publish that fact or, if you wish, to publish this letter over my signature.

Very truly yours,
Carl T. Pomroy

JORETTA

A LOVE STORY

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER Author of "DAD'S GIRL" Etc.

CHAPTER 57

Allan Dowling was nowhere in sight, but the others must have seen him, for they continued on through the narrow streets. And then, just when Joretta and Uncle Charley had decided to detour and speed up to get ahead of the two men, they saw them stop a man with two mules and begin to bargain with him. It was obvious that Dowling must have disappeared on such a moment and they were preparing to follow.

Uncle Charley looked about him. Where to get mules? "You kin talk Spanish, can't you, Jetty? Guess we'll have to argue for a couple a mules, next."

By the time they had managed to strike a reasonable bargain, the two conspirators were out of sight, but supposing that they had seen Dowling start out on the rugged mountain trail on which they found themselves just outside the city, they proceeded on as fast as they could urge their reluctant mounts. What had become of Allan Dowling? He seemed to have totally disappeared. Were they following a will of the wisp?

The road was little more than a trail. Still, he might have taken a car out of the village, with which he would make slow enough speed anyway. After a while, they passed a peon on a mule. Had he recently passed an American gentleman, in a car, perhaps, Joretta inquired.

Ah, si, a big Americano in a noisy machine went out slowly over the stony road.

Then they were on the right trail, and they knew that Ben and his companion must be somewhere not far ahead. They had been in no hurry to follow directly after their employer. Supposedly, their plan had been to allow him to reach his destination and then surprise him wherever they found him. Probably at some rancho house with a beautiful senorita, was their mutual surmise, and as Uncle Charley well knew.

"But we've got to reach them or him afore he gets wherever he's goin', Jetty. We don't want to be spyin' on him—only to warn him of spies. Wish we'd got a car back there. Jist a chance one'll come along and we can hire 'em to speed us up. Giddyap, you onem, lazy beast," he slapped vigorously at the mule.

But no car came along that way and neither did they overtake anyone after an hour of steady urging of the plodding mules.

"Tell you wat, Jetty. We better stop right here and now, cause we ain't standin' no chance of catchin' nobody. Looks like we'd have to let them two scallywags go ahead with their dirty spyin', and your dad'll have to make the best of it. We done our best, but I don't see how we lost 'em so easy as we did. They must a got a blame sight better mules than we did. We might rest here for a spell and eat this snack, and then get back to the boat as soon as we kin."

Joretta agreed, reluctantly, but there seemed to be nothing else that they could do. They dismounted and tethered the mules in the shade of a big rock. The sun was high now and the heat was intense with the glare on the rocks and sand.

Meanwhile, Allan Dowling had jounced along in the chugging, dilapidated motor car to where his trail left the main road. There, a man and two mules awaited him. He mounted one of the mules, while he asked the usual questions of the peon, who replied in broken English.

"Any news from up there?" "SI, senior, mucho great news," he beamed.

"What? Another strike?" incredulous.

"SI, mucho more than the other time. Ah! so mucho, eet ees—how you say—a fortune."

Allan Dowling could not believe what his ears heard. Was it possible that, on the verge of ruin, he was to succeed? Or was the fellow exaggerating? All he could do was be patient and see for himself. His spirits mounted, however. He was like a man sentenced to death and given a reprieve. He coaxed the mule over the stony trail with mounting impatience. It had grown so familiar to him that he might have followed it with his eyes closed, and he wondered how it could have been so very difficult to find at first.

Finally, after another hour's climb, they reached the scene of activity. The place was indeed active. Dowling almost fell off his mule in his anxiety to reach the foreman and verify the messenger's report.

It was true. Ore that was almost pure gold, they had been bringing out for two days. No small vein, either. It promised incalculable wealth. Dowling was so weak with relief that he had to sit down for awhile to recover.

The sudden change it portended in his whole scheme of things was tremendous. No assignments, no bankruptcy, no admission of folly and of being the victim of a clever crook as he had reluctantly begun to suspect. He had won! He wiped the perspiration from his face with vast relief. No more wretched days and horrible nights. No more secret cruises and sneaking ashore with the suspicions of his crew buzzing at his back, of which he was well aware in spite of their apparent loyalty and lack of curiosity. He knew that when people do suspicious things and demand secrecy, they are always suspected of doing even worse than they are actually. That was over now. He was a free man—respectable in his own eyes and others and a successful one, at that!

But other eyes than those of his crew had watched his departure from Ensenada. A score of men were gathered in the shuttered room of a stucco building on the outskirts of the town. It was apparent that they had been there all night; talking, drinking, lounging and watchful. The hilts of their automatics gleamed above their leather holsters under the brilliant-colored serapes.

The leader and spokesman of the group had aroused them all at dawn and commanded orderly attention. He spoke in rapid Spanish. Did he have their unwavering support, one and all? He, the most powerful and the most clever man in all Mexico was destined soon to be his ruler. An insurrection against the present government would be a sure thing. It but awaited his leadership, as they all knew.

Their progress had been retarded for lack of funds. Now, fate had put the knowledge of a source of wealth, great wealth, into their very hands. So near and so ridiculously easy to confiscate, was this gold mine of the wealthy Americano, who had so patiently developed it to the place where it would be no trouble to take it on and work it profitably. Soon, their wealth would be so great that they could command many men and horses, with which to accomplish their end.

What right had the Americano, anyway, to come into their country and carry out gold? Ah! he had papers. It was to laugh. What were a few papers? So easy to destroy. So easy to get. But the gold—that was different!

Their spies had watched carefully the developments at the mine for weeks. So they were aware that the Americano had a surprise in store for him. Give him time to recover from that great surprise—and they would give him another. They would be generous. Let him be happy for one day. Laughter.

So it was that Joretta and Uncle

Charley were resting, with their mules tethered in somnolent quiet in the shade of the cliff, when the sound of horses' hoofs broke the torrid stillness of near noonday. The two looked quickly at each other and strained their ears to listen.

"It's more than two horses coming," Joretta almost whispered. No more had they concealed themselves than the party of insurrectionists galloped by, raising a cloud of dust that was stifling. Their shouts and bantering laughter as they rode, echoed against the hillsides and could be heard long after they had passed.

"Now, who do you suppose they are, and where are they going?" Joretta asked with awe. She had read about outlaw bands and seen them in the movies, but to be here on a lonely mountain trail, outside her own country, hiding when such a party galloped by—was something else again. It was uncomfortably thrilling to say the least.

Uncle Charley rumbled his hair and peered after the dusty cloud. "Up to some devilry, you can bet your bottom dollar on that. Say, Jetty, I don't like the idea of your dad bein' up here somewheres and seein' things goin' on. He may be all right, but it looks bad. What possessed him to be comin' here all these weeks, you'll have to ask the next one, I swan, I don't know."

"But what shall we do?" "Well, I don't see as they's anything to do at all. With a couple o' pesky mules, we can't get fur, that's sure. And no tellin' how far you dad went. Best we git back to the Montezuma and wait fur him, like we should be. And hope he will be along early tomorrow mornin' ready to start home again."

"If he hasn't already come to some harm up there in the mountains," anxiously.

"Oh, please, they ain't a chance in a hundred that that bunch was after anything to do with your dad. Plenty they could be doin' without mixin' up in eny affairs of hisn', he attempted to reassure her, with more assurance than he felt himself.

Not wholly satisfied, but willing to obey Uncle Charley's advice, Joretta mounted her mule, and they returned by the way they had come, to the village and thence to the waiting yacht.

They managed to slip aboard without being seen; and later discovered to their consternation, that Ben and Olson were in their cabins asleep. Perhaps they had taken the wrong trail and given up. At any rate they could not imagine what had happened.

Crumit, Sanderson And Frieda Hempel Are On Air

By MILDRED MASON

DIRECTING an orchestra every day except Sunday for five years without a vacation is the record of Vincent Sorey, orchestra director for the Columbia Broadcasting System. He has been in radio broadcasting for nine years and is therefore known as one of radio's pioneers. He directs the Gauchos, Italian Idyll, Quiet Harmonies and other features on various days during the week over WKRC, Cincinnati.

Sorey says that he has always been musically inclined—since the day when he jumped up and down while in his mother's arms, in rhythm to music being played by a string ensemble back in Italy. As his pet aversions he names monkeys, because one cost him $1500 one night when it knocked a jug valued at that sum. He has had two pet monkeys. Steak, chicken and spaghetti are his favorite dishes and sleep is his favorite hobby. His well known composition, "Waltz de la Passion," it is said, was written at the time he was in love with the Chilean Princess Arrehobaho.

These are just a few of his mannerisms so that you will better understand him the next time you hear him on the air.

Crumit-Sanderson Featured

Frank Crumit and Julia Sanderson, famous song and comedy team, will be heard twice weekly over the NBC network beginning Thursday evening. For several weeks they have been featured on the Blackstone program on Tuesday evening but beginning this week they will be heard on another Blackstone Plantation program on Thursday evening at 9 o'clock. The program will come through station WCKY, Covington.

Honor Jenny Lind

Frieda Hempel, operatic prima donna, will sing one of the favorite songs of Jenny Lind, nineteenth century singer, when she is featured as guest artist on the Maxwell House program Thursday evening at 9:30 o'clock, over the NBC network through WLW, Cincinnati. The song which Jenny Lind first sang on September 11, 1850, and which will be repeated by Miss Hempel Thursday evening is that old favorite, "The Last Rose of Summer."

Feature Violin Solo

A violin solo, "Meditation" from "Thais," will be featured on the Brazilian American Coffee Matinee program Thursday afternoon from 5 until 6 o'clock through WLW, Cincinnati. Popular numbers and semi-classical numbers will be heard on the same program.

Uncle Abe (left) and David

American country life probably is best typified on the radio today by Uncle Abe and David, who, besides running Everybody's Equippery and the Hometown Thistledown News, take an active part in every affair of consequence in Skowhegan. Uncle Abe, who is portrayed by Phillips Lord, left, certainly has his hands full when David, played by Arthur Allen, right, goes into one of his frequent tantrums and goes down cellar and "sets."

The Theater

Emil Jannings, the German film star who was born in Brooklyn, has been signed by Paramount to do some talkies to follow the success in silents he experienced with this company some time ago.

His first attempt will be "The Man I Killed," from a play by Maurice Rostand, Ernst Lubitsch, under whose direction Jannings achieved several successes including "Passion," will have charge of the German star's first renewal picture and the work will be done in the New York studios.

This will be Jannings' first work in the East, as his "Patriot," "Last Command" and "Betrayal" were photographed in Hollywood during those days when pictures could be made in the open. After "Betrayal," Jannings went to Germany with everybody saying he had no chance in the talkies.

Emil Jannings

Makes surprising comeback with splendid acting in first talkie for American consumption, "The Blue Angel," made in Germany. Marlene Dietrich plays opposite him.

Jannings is being heard in this country now in "The Blue Angel," the UFA production in which he appears with Marlene Dietrich and which is released here by Paramount. The picture was unfortunately recorded, there being faulty stretches in the sound film, but Paramount officials believe that with their fine equipment, the sound can be made satisfactory.

The story of "The Man I Killed" deals with a French soldier who has killed a German in hand-to-hand combat during the war. Conscience stricken he goes to the Fatherland and attempts to make amends. The author is a son of the French dramatist of another generation.

Photoplay Magazine reports that the arrival of talkies served one good purpose in eliminating a number of absurdities by which half-way inventors hoped to overcome the bugaboo of the subtitle in films.

One of these was steel tape, clamped to the side of the actor's head away from the camera. When he wanted to say "I love you," he pressed a bulb in his pocket and a strip of tape with these words shot out at an angle from his mouth and was caught by the camera.

Another suggestion was the use of "ballons," such as in comic strips, to convey the actor's meaning, being printed on the film. Another inventor proposed printing the word "Boom" to convey the noise of a falling vase, while "ting-a-ling" would mean the ringing of a bell. Another inventor, it will be remembered, would quip audiences with special spectacles to give the pictures third dimension. The first proposed method of cooling theaters, the magazine points out, was a screen made of ice.

Al Capone, it is reported, will not go to Hollywood to direct "Our Gang" comedies for Hal Roach.

MODEL HIGH SCHOOL RISING ON GROUNDS OF O. S. UNIVERSITY

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 21.—A high school that embodies the new ideas of efficient and economical arrangements of classrooms, laboratories and offices and that will offer the most advanced principles of teaching is rising on the Ohio State University campus here.

In the university records, the new structure is designated as a teacher training building. Actually, it is the first half of a university high school and the first unit of a campus school system that will carry the youth from the preschool period through college.

The building is being erected at a cost of $400,000. Equipment for it will cost another $50,000. Due to its arrangement and to prevailing conditions, the school is costing approximately 35 cents per cubic foot, which architects and school men regard as a remarkably low price for this type of building.

Architecturally, the building will be an adaptation of a New England colonial style. It will front at the northern end of what was once old Ohio field, scene of Ohio State football championships in 1916, 1917, and 1920. It will be an integral part of what is planned as a college of education group of buildings. The ground floor of the school will be occupied by a cafeteria with a capacity of 250 students at one sitting, and kitchen. Offices of the principal, vice principal, dean of girls and clerks will be located on the first floor. There will also be a reception room for special visitors and for parent-teacher association meetings.

Classrooms and laboratories throughout the building will be arranged with reference to related subjects. Also on the first floor will be four mathematics and two music classrooms, and industrial and commercial arts laboratories. There will also be conference rooms for administration, mathematics and the arts.

On the second floor will be four language classrooms, and three for history and the social sciences. There will also be the library, gymnasium, conference rooms for English, history and the foreign languages, boys' locker and shower rooms, and a room for men teachers.

On the third floor will be laboratories for general science, physics, chemistry, the fine arts and for the household arts. There will also be conference rooms for fine arts, the household arts, and science. There will also be four preparation and store rooms for science, a women teacher's room, girls' lockers and showers, and the gymnasium balcony.

The classrooms will be so arranged that they will yield a maximum use and will be idle as little as possible. Plans for the building were drawn by Howard Dwight Smith, university architect, who worked out the details with a special committee representing the various departments of the college of education.

The building is to be ready for occupancy by January 1, 1932. When it becomes available the university will offer high school instruction with its own teaching staff. It now operates a pre-school and an elementary demonstration school of six grades. The high school will have a capacity of 450 pupils.

LAMPS AND THEIR SHADES ARE IMPORTANT IN DECORATION OF ROOMS

Lamps and their shades are important things in the decoration of rooms. When they are all wrong in color, size, shape and pattern, they spoil the effect of good taste and harmony, which is the aim of the one who decorates the room. When they are interesting and harmonious they add enormously to the decorative effect. Some new lamps are pictured; left, a pottery base with a "travel" shade; right, shade done in punch or cut-out work reminiscent below, left to right, small lamp with fern pattern shade—ferns are shellacked on parchment; rich effect gotten by cutting out pattern from gold paper; hand-painted shade in design of classic simplicity.
